I was privileged to share some🚄 NS cybervibes on the Cybersec Netherlands stage and I am very GRATEFUL to work with the best cyberteam ever that was also present during the conference. Some of our ethical hackers, business information security officers, awareness and academy team, blue, red and green team, cyber business partners, iso's, cyber recruitment stars, etc, etc, all chimed in to make this a huge success. Btw, did I mention we have vacancies at www.werkenbijns.nl 😁 thx Sander Hulsman Koninklijke Jaarbeurs and team for the great experience!

Threat Informed Defence
One of the absolute best keynotes for me on Cybersec Netherlands in de Koninklijke Jaarbeurs last week was the one from Caity Randall.

Caity stated the difference between Compliance Focus and Threat Informed Defence Never before have I heard someone explain it so clearly.

I loved the analogy of the Lord of The Rings, where two small hobbits managed to bypass all sorts of danger, including armies of orks and Sauron's all-seeing eye, to destroy the "one ring" in the middle of Mount Doom.

In this analogy, we can safely say that Sauron would have been compliant with all his safety measures, but it didn't prevent Frodo and Sam from actually destroying his 'crown jewel'.

Obviously, a fantasy film is not reality, but still, I thought it was pretty clever and helps people realize that it's smart to put their resources towards actual operational risks.

Thanks Caity!
